

Inspection Criteria

The quarter trim should be made of felt fabric so that white marks caused by damage do not stand out. When the quarter trim is made of a material other than felt fabric, the quarter trim should not extend to the tailgate opening. If it extends to the tailgate opening, that portion should be supplied separately.

Reason

When the quarter trim is made of felt fabric, white marks caused by damage do not stand out, which makes the quarter trim more reusable.

When the quarter trim does not extend to the tailgate opening, damage to the quarter trim is less likely to occur when the rear panel is damaged.

When the tailgate opening portion of the quarter trim is supplied separately, if the tailgate opening portion of the quarter trim is damaged, it is not necessary to replace the quarter trim assembly, which reduces the repair cost.

Good Example

The quarter trim was not damaged because it is made with felt fabric.

The quarter trim was not damaged because it does not extend to the tailgate opening.

Example where the quarter trim is not included in the assembly and is supplied individually.

Poor Example

Only the end was damaged and turned white because the material used is not pliable.

The quarter trim was damaged at the tailgate opening.

The quarter trim extends to the tailgate opening.

No other areas were damaged.

Only around the opening was damaged.

The quarter trim was part of the integral structure, so the entire assembly was replaced.
